

Gardening

Ralph Waldo Emerson, the famous writer and original appreciator of all things natural, believed all human grief and sorrows become dwarfed by simply stepping outside and soaking in the natural world around us. His words still ring true for nature-lovers everywhere who know the universal joy and happiness that fresh air, sunlight, and fresh food provide. No matter where you live, you can surround yourself with the natural wonders that the world has to offer, and sink your fingers into the soil to add beauty to the world in which we live. Regardless of your skill level, a pruning professional or a gardening neophyte, you can bring the garden of your dreams to your terrace, learn the ancient art of bonsai, and cultivate your own vegetables. Dig in and experience the balance, tranquillity, and creativity that is waiting to bloom.
